Course Introduction

After-Action Reviews (AARs) are a powerful, real-time learning and accountability tool increasingly embedded in adaptive management, results-based management (RBM), and utilization-focused evaluation frameworks. After-Action Reviews (AAR) in M&E Training Course equips M&E professionals with practical, evidence-driven methodologies to systematically capture implementation insights, performance gaps, unintended outcomes, and operational lessons immediately after project activities, interventions, or critical milestones. Participants will learn how to transform experiential knowledge into actionable evaluation evidence that strengthens program effectiveness, transparency, and continuous improvement.

Designed for development, humanitarian, public sector, and impact-oriented organizations, this course integrates AAR facilitation techniques, learning loops, data synthesis, knowledge management systems, and decision-support mechanisms. Through hands-on case studies, participants will apply AAR tools to real-world M&E scenarios, ensuring lessons learned are institutionalized, communicated, and translated into strategic adaptation, policy influence, and improved development outcomes.
